President's Message

As the 28th President of the Sri Lanka Library Association, I consider it a privilege to address all of you. I have been actively involved in the activities of the Library Association for over 21 years. Our New Council will be expected to take the following steps to promote the Sri Lanka Library Association and the library profession in general within next two years (2021/2023).

1. Implementation of the Strategic Plan of the Sri Lanka Library Association.

Extending its term by another 5 years and further activating it. Inform all members about completed projects, ongoing projects as well as unfinished projects.

2. Commemoration of the 61st anniversary of the Sri Lanka Library Association.

I propose to award honorary fellowship for 61 senior members who served SLLA to commemorate this valuable event. Identify the eligible members for this would be better if go through the beginning of the membership directory (From Membership No 01) intend to implement the relevant activities in accordance with the recommendations of the Membership Committee and the approval of the Council.

3. 60 years to the Educational Service of the Sri Lanka Library Association by 2021.

On the advice of the Education committee and the Council, I look forward to organizing a function to honor those who have already served as lecturers of the Association for a long time.

4. Compiling a SLLA Management Manual

This council hopes to compile a manual containing all the legal matters pertaining to the Sri Lanka Library Association.

5. "Buddhi Prabodhani" General Knowledge enhance program.

Organizing a program to develop the general knowledge and research skills of all professionals engaged in the library profession.

6. Enhance the Personal Development of Library Professionals.

It is expected to conduct several programs to enhance the Continuous Professional Development (CPD) of various groups of Library professionals. This can be organized in collaboration with the Professional Organizations and the Local Authorities

7. Taking action to compose a theme song for the Sri Lanka Library Association.

Encourage members and gather facts about opportunities to compose a song based on their creations. Submit those lyrics to veteran song writers and choose the most suitable song according to their instructions.

When comparing with other professionals, it is sad to say, we can see the following lethargic factors throughout our library professionals.

1. Since our current Library professional are holding many academic and professional qualifications still they cannot be competed with our past members who had limited qualifications.
2. The general situation of our professionals is freeze with their normal duties, not try to have any responsibilities than that.
3. Most of our professionals are becoming physically unable than others. Don't know the reason.
4. Their titles are Librarians, but having nothing about sufficient knowledge in indigenous or general

As library professionals, we can all overcome various challenges adhering the vision of "one for all and all for one". My dear fellow colleagues; I wish your almost positive suggestions to build up the profession with quality. I would like to end my speech by extending the hand of friendship to all of you who are honored today for the progress of the Association on behalf of all new Council appointed.

Thank you.

Dr. R D Ananda Tissa,
President of SLLA (2021/2023)

Sustainable future and libraries: are we ready?

The Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), also known as the Global Goals, were adopted by the United Nations in 2015, including more than 150 world leaders, as a universal call to action. There are 17 goals and 169 aims, further 224 targets which aim to end poverty, hunger and inequality, take action on climate change and the environment, improve access to health and education, and build strong institutions and partnerships ensuring that by 2030 all people enjoy peace and prosperity.

The objective of the article is to highlight how Sri Lankan libraries can contribute in action to achieve SDGs.

History

The United Nations (UN) Conference on the 'Human Environment' was authorized by the UN General Assembly in 1968. Although the idea came in 1968, General Assembly of the UN decided to convene a conference in 1972 at Stockholm to discuss the resolution. The major theme expressed as the idea that it was possible to combine economic growth with environmental protection as reported in the Brundtland report in 1987.

However, in the beginning of millennium, in 2000, world leaders wanted to shape a broad vision which was translated into Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) and many countries in the world adopted the concept and work carried out to achieve those eight goals by about 2015. As the MDGs came to their deadlines in 2015 a new agenda emerged at Sustainable Development Summit held in 2015, to transform the world to better meet human needs and the requirements of the economic transformations known as 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development Goals (Maria & Chinemerem, 2019).

Objectives of the SDGs

Achieving these 17 SDGs and the 169 targets will mean that "No one was left behind", but it will also reflect the progressive and cumulative engagement of countries, communities, sectors, public and private organizations and citizens in this process. This will be accomplished by bringing together their respective governments, businesses, media, institutions of higher education, and local NGOs to improve the lives of the people in their country by the year 2030.

Sustainable Future and Sri Lanka

Countries have committed to prioritize progress for those who're furthest behind. As one of the member countries of the UN, the Government of Sri Lanka has undertaken several initiatives to facilitate its implementation in the country in 2015. These included:

- establishment of a dedicated ministry for sustainable development as the focal point for coordinating, facilitating and reporting on the implementation of the SDGs, which is Ministry of Sustainable Development, Wildlife and Regional Development (MSDWRD);
- establishment of a Parliamentary Select Committee for Sustainable Development to provide political leadership for the implementation of the SDGs; and enactment of the Sustainable Development Act No. 19 of 2017 to provide the legal framework for implementing the SDGs. (Voluntary National Review, 2018,p.37)

The Ministry took several steps further, to engage with other line ministries and national and 335 sub-national stakeholders through awareness, consultation and capacity building training programmes during the 2015-2018 periods. In addition, the following steps have been taken to facilitate the involvement of public agencies in the SDGs implementation process in Sri Lanka:

- A strategy for public service delivery has been drafted covering several goals related to sustainable development.
- A draft handbook which maps SDGs implementation responsibilities of 425 statutory agencies, based on the mandates of these agencies, has been prepared.
- A ‘Task Force for preparation of Vocational National Review’ (VNR) was appointed from key government agencies to guide and assist the VNR process.
- Creating a council to promote this concept among Sri Lankans, consisting 10 staff members.
- Publication of SDGs indicators framework in three languages.

Currently, Sri Lanka is in 87th place among other countries on achievement of the SDGs (68.4%) and future endeavor is must for achieving 17 goals to develop the nation of the country. Each and every professional should be attended for that and how Librarians can be taken part on this important issue is examined.

Sustainable future and Libraries

Within this quest for local sustainable development, the Library and Information Services sector should be a key-partner and active contributor. Every single person who is in the field can do something to upward this concept.

Libraries whether academic, school, public, national or special can perform the following functions and can contribute achieving sustainable goals through implementing services and playing different roles in this way;

i) Information services:

A very important role of the library is to provide information sources which will help augment ideas collected from other sources. Information is an essential element in the communication process. Through information services a person is informed, he is equally being educated. With the advent of ICT, this role is facilitated, hence users can access information via the internet to update the knowledge and keep abreast of current trends. Through this service libraries can assist to achieve 17 goals specially 1,3,4 and 12 goals.

ii) Educational role:

Inclusive, equitable and relevant quality education is ensured, while promoting lifelong learning opportunities for all; is the most related goal out of 17 to the university libraries. Libraries ensure lifelong education by providing various information resources. Libraries can support the school curriculum; expanding resources to support teaching and learning, further, by providing supplementary textbooks, reference materials and even non-print materials. According to Ejimkonye, Nwoguand and Obiagwu (2005) the library performs its educational role at four levels: formal, informal, non-formal and propaganda. At the formal level, the academic library identifies itself with the goals and objectives of its parent institution by providing curriculum-oriented materials. At the informal level, the public library allows users to read whatever materials they want to read and these materials contain educational value. The non-formal level is directed to those who are not reading for an examination but who want to improve on their different trades like carpentry, mechanics, electricity among others. At the propaganda level, libraries are used for propagate ideas, information and point of view. They can be veritable agents for dissemination of beliefs, doctrines and practices.

iii) Research role:

The research which is an inquiry to discover existing knowledge for the building of theory and solving society problems is an essential activity in the library. The library organizes and presents information, materials, such as teaching material, digital and non-digital, in traditional and emerging forms, thus saving the researchers’ time in retrieving information.

They also provide publications of previous research findings for subsequent references by the other researchers. Further, librarians can help research activities conduct in 17 areas to understand inequalities in the society by improving education developing curriculum, launching surveys, case studies.

iv) Cultural services:

The library is the chief center for cultural revival. It is the center of all cultural activation because it actively promotes participation and appreciation of arts literature which is part of cultural heritage is one of the areas stock materials highlight.

v) Self-development:

People can develop themselves by going to the library for independent studies. Individualized instruction can take place in the library without help of any teacher yet this ensures expansion of knowledge. Promoting literacy for self-development can be done any type of libraries. Information literacy is the ability to define one’s information needs and then to access, process, evaluate and use information for decision- making, learning and problem-solving. It is a tool for life-long learning in the networked environment. The objectives of information literacy include: knowing how to locate and access information, knowing how to understand and use information. It assists with literacy development and promotes the concept of reading as a pleasurable, voluntary activity, which contributes to an individual’s quality of life (Goal 10).

vi) Access to knowledge:

Libraries pool resources together for the maximum accessibility and usability by the potential users. Information is power and information brings knowledge and can improve offering advice for professional development and improvement of knowledge for appropriate learning. Hence the library helps its patrons to access such information and knowledge with ease.

vii) Recreational role:

Users can read in the library at leisure for pleasure. Libraries provide various information media (print and non-print) that are used for recreational activities. Libraries can promote in addition love of reading and learning.

viii) Promotional activities:

In addition to that, librarians can contribute to publicize the concept of SDGs by conducting awareness sessions like IFLA and ALA are active in raising awareness of SDGs ideas of current users. The main importance is that creativity, knowhow, technology and financial resources from all of society are necessary to achieve the SDGs in every context. Therefore awareness is must by the all categories of people in the country.

Sri Lankan librarians also can raise SDGs ideas of the public through story telling sessions, as information sharing is emphasized by the goal- 5, through the concept of equal access. The concept can be made aware through different sessions with general public such as sessions of exchanging seeds for gardening, production of reusable bags which shows symbol of SDGs. Further by communicating literacy skill sessions, creating websites and arranging webinars to educate, organizing annual conferences, training sessions etc.
